

Tomorrow Begins Our Year End Sale

Of Suits and Coats At Reductions Of A Quarter To A Third

This sale is easily first among sales of suits and coats. It is not a distribution of obsolete styles and odd sizes, but a presentation of the best fashions of the season in a complete assortment of models and sizes.

As it is a fixed event in our calendar of sales women and young women look forward to its announcement with expediency and interest, as it gives them an opportunity to make additions to Winter wardrobes at the lowest prices of the season.

GIRL BURNS TO DEATH TO PROVE HER LOVE

A Living Flame, She Tries to Embrace Man Who Had Spurned Her.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—Sprung by Willis Cannon, whom she loved, and eager to sacrifice her life to prove her affection for him, Reba Smith, twenty-three years old, poured a large quantity of kerosene over her head and body the other night, applied a match, and, singing a love song, rushed, a living flame, into the room in her home where her lover sat.

Continuing her song, and apparently unaffected by the flames, which enveloped her entire body, the girl made an effort to embrace the man with whom she had quarreled only a moment before. He, however, terrified by the scene, ran from the house and into the home of a neighbor, where he grasped what had occurred and then fell fainting to the floor.

The song of the woman became a cry, and she attempted to follow her lover. By this time, however, the flames had consumed her clothing and while a score of persons stood panic-stricken on the pavement, she dropped on the doorstep. In a few minutes she was dead.

"I thought she was fooling and told her to go ahead," Cannon explained, when asked why he had not prevented her from carrying out her threat.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—The secret sorrow that pretty Grace Field has been nursing for several months has just become public property through Row hell hounds of the press. Miss Field, who dances like a Pavlova, only more sanely, was escaping the rigors of a hot summer on Broadway with Jane Peyton at her place near Winsted, Conn. a few months ago.

Near the summer house is a phrased lake where canoeing is the amusement. While dipping the paddle one day Miss Field heard a scream and a splash and looking saw an upturned canoe drifting away—tell-tale evidence of a near tragedy. Pretty soon a head bobbed to the surface and Miss Field was swimming toward it.

She rescued the woman neatly and towed her to shore and found her fainting. Presently there were signs of life, the rescued person opened her eyes and with a sigh asked for a vanity mirror. It was given her and when she saw the beautiful marcel waves washed away she looked at Miss Field in a withering way and snapped: "Heavens! You certainly mussed my hair all up with your rough-house methods." It was the first time Miss Field had ever been a real heroine and to have it turn out that way was quite more than she could bear.

It was on Fifth avenue that Verne H. Porter, of the Green Book, discovered the Altitude of Altruism. A pretty girl was standing in front of
